Bones in the face, and not just gravity, are responsible for wrinkles and the general 'hang dog' expression that comes with age, a new study suggests. David Kahn, _____[1] on ageing, said that as people grow older, the bones in the face _____[2]. Presenting the results of his study to a conference of plastic surgeons in America, Dr. Kahn, who is based in California, said: "When we think of ageing of the face, we think that the skin and the fat _____[3] looser or bigger. Plastic surgeons _____[4] just lift everything back up and take out some skin to tighten it. They don't usually think of the shrinking of the bones. I think we need to look at a way _____[5] something that adds volume to the face, like fat injections."

Dr. Kahn found age-related changes in the bony elements of the face by studying three dimensional scans of 30 men and 30 women _____[6]: 25 to 44 years old, 45 to 64 years old, and older than 65. Comparing the scans, he noticed _____[7] changes in the angles of the bones of the faces of older people, showing a clear loss of volume. _____[8] these changes were present in the middle of the face and around the nose. The findings dispel the belief that only gravity creates wrinkles, Dr. Kahn said.
